What separates you and your firm from others?

Life's transitions—especially those involving separation and divorce, custody and child support—can be confusing, emotional and stressful. That's why we don't "handle cases." We have relationships. We find creative solutions by understanding people's goals and helping them create solutions to meet them. Our attorneys possess a deep understanding of family law, but our approach is a holistic combination of expertise, experience, intuition and compassion.

I have successfully resolved complex cases involving property division and hidden assets, valuation of businesses and professional practices, real and personal property, stocks and deferred compensation, and domestic and international custody and support. But I'm even prouder to have helped people formerly mired in some of life's most difficult experiences to find a way forward.
